OIC hails Amir's proposal on economic n_{0} co-operation

UNITED NATIONS, Oct 4, (KUNA): Islamic foreign ministers hailed today a proposal by HH the Amir of Kuwait on closer co-operation between rich and poor countries and easing econ-omic hardships in developing countries.

ordinating meeting of foreign ministers of the Organisation of Islamic Conference (OIC) said "the meeting took note with satisfaction" of the three-point proposal contained in an address before the UN General Assembly last Wednesday by the Amir, Sheikh Jaber Al Ahmed Al was issued today only.

The Amir's proposal calls for the waiver of interest due on all loans, reconsideration by international financial institutions of their stringent conditions for development aid, and the expansion and regulation of scientific and technical aid from wealthier to poorer countries.

Support

The meeting expressed its full support for the proposal and expressed relief and satisfaction at the ceasefire between Iraq and 598 and a comprehensive settlement would be successful and enable both sides "to turn their energies toward the urgent and pigantic task of the reconstruc-tion of their economies which had been ravaged by the war."

Sabah reviews Gulf situation in talks with Shultz

UNITED NATIONS, Oct 4, (KUNA): Kuwait's Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs Sheikh Sabah Al Ahmed met yesterday with US Secretary of State George P. Shultz to discuss the situation in the Arabian Gulf and the Middle East peace process, State Department spokesman Charles Redman said yesterday. Redman told reporters after meetings between Shultz and a number of Arab foreign mini-sters, the meeting with Sheikh Sabah involved a review of the situation in the Gulf.

"We have a very good record of co-operation with Kuwait, and both sides expressed continued resolve to continue that. kind of co-operation. It's paid off, it's worked," he said.

There is no substitute for freedom, says released hostage

DAMASCUS, Oct 4, (AP): Indian professor Mithileshwar Singh, released after 20 months as a hostage in Lebanon, said today that be was treated well hut that "there is no substitute for freedom."

Singh was reunited with his wife at the American embassy this afternoon and a special US Air Force plane landed in Damascus to take him to an American military hospital in Wieshaden, West Germany for a complete checkup.

Reagan rules out talks with captors cies): Reagan today again ruled out negotiations with the captors of nine American hostages and said liberating them remains a "great problem" despite the release of an Indian captive.

The White House, meanwhile, said the release of the Indian in Beirut was "tempered by the knowledge that nine innocent Americans" remain hostages in Lebanon.

Reagan, in an exchange with reporters, did not explain how Singh's freedom was obtained. But be rejected any US deals with the captors, believed to be a pro-Iranian Islamic group.

In 1985, Reagan secretly approved US weapons sales to Iran in an agreement that was supposed to help gain the freedom of the captive Americans.

When the plot surfaced in 1986, it produced the greatest uproar in Reagan's eight-year presidency.

Earlier, presidential spokes-man Boh Hall said White House happiness over Singh's release was tempered by the continued ordeal of the nine American hostages.

Experiment with genetically altered cells recommended

WASHINGTON, Oct 4, (AP): In what could be a major step toward gene therapy, a federal advisory hoard recommended that researchers be allowed for the first time to inject genetically altered cells into human patients.

"If this protocol were to work, I'd expect that within six to 12 months there could be a proposal to do a gene therapy experi-ment," said Dr William J. Gartland, the executive secretary of the recombinant DNA advisory committee to the National Institutes of Health

Proposed

The advisory committee yes-terday voted 16-5 in favour of proposal to inject genetically altered cells into patients to determine how well a certain form of cancer therapy is working. A so-called marker gene would be put into a patient's cells in the lah and then placed back inside the patient. The experiment would not attempt to fight the cancer hut would track the genetically altered cells carrying the altered genes. Gartland

The experiment would be limited to 10 patients, and those patients would have life expecta-tions of only about 90 days due to the advancement of their cancer,

Approve

NIH director Dr James B. Wyngaarden and the Food and Drug Administration must still approve the proposal before it is carried out.

Due to the split in the vote, a decision from Wyngaarden "will prohably take a couple of mon-ths," Gartland said. "The NIH director will probably want to know why those five voted against it.'

The main concern for those who opposed the experiment, he said, was "what they're using is a virus to 'infect' the patients' cells and put the marker in the patients' cells.

SANTIAGO, Oct 4, (Reuter): More than 1,200 Chileans have been arrested, 102 wounded and three killed in the run-up to tomorrow's vote on General Augusto Pinochet's presidency, according to human rights groups.

Opponents of the general have received death threats and some had their homes attacked, apparently hy Chileans who favour an eight-year extension of Pinochet's 15-year rule.

Those threatened with death included a Roman Catholic bishop, Carlos Camus, and the son of Orlando Letelier, who served as foreign minister in the government which fell in the 1973 coup that brought Pinochet to power. Letelier was blown to pieces in Washington in 1976 by a car bomh the opposition says was placed by Pinochet agents. His son Juan Pahlo Letelier, is a youth leader in a left-wing splinter group of the Socialist Party. Spurred

Heavy rain in the mnuntainous Kashmir and Jammu areas, has been blamed for the flooding. Authorities said the Ravi and Chenab Rivers, which originate in the mountains, have begun to recede, while another river, the Sutlej, is threatening villages in the southern part of the Punjah. At present, the flooding threat comes from the Sutlej and officials say work is under way to protect the eity of Bahawalpur, 120 miles (200 kilometres) to the south, from severe flooding. Officials said the Sutlei, which flows west from India, had turned into a mere trickle after a dam built on the Indian side 30 years ago and that it's unexpected dramatie rise devastated villages that had sprung np on the flood plain.

Khaddafi presses for federation Libya differs on Maghreb unity

TUNIS, Oct 4, (Reuter): Khaddafi's visioo of a united Maghreh differs from that of the four other Arah states which have agreed to work towards unity. Lihyan number two Abdelsalam Jalloud said in an interview published in Tunis today. At a meeting of officials from Algeria, Lihya, Mauritania, Morocco and Tunisia in Tripoli last month, Libya was alone in pressing for a federation of the five states, Jalloud told the progovernment Tunisian newspaper La Presse.

"All the projects submitted revolved around creating an alliance of states. We were the only ones to propose a union of the federal type," he said.

Obstacles

Khaddafi and other beads of state of the five countries met outside Algiers in June for their first summit ever and agreed to open detailed negotiations on an eventual Maghreb union.

At the Tripoli meeting, a Maghreb sub-committee was looking at the structures and insututions of the proposed union.

Morocco's representative at the meeting, speaker of parliament Ahmed Osman, said ater that the Libyan project difcred sharply from the others in hat it envisaged a federal super-tate with all the attributes of overeignty.

Khaddafi: unity

Jalloud, who left Tunis last Friday at the end of a 13-day visit, said one of the obstacles to the kind of union Khaddali wanted was that the educated elite was isolated from reality.

'Some intellectuals in the Arab Maghreb and even politicians are unfortunately under the influence of European models ... some consider the Maghreb culturally linked to Europe," he added.

Welcome

Jalloud, apparently referring to Algerian-Libya unity moves, said Libya saw no conflict between bilateral action and huilding a united Maghreh.

Children tortured in several countries

LONDON, Oct 4, [UPI]: Amnesty International painted an "ugly picture" in its yearly human rights report, saying that people and sometimes children are tortured in one-third of the countries around the world.

In the survey of 135 nations, the organisation said the use of "death squads" to ferrorise political opposition appeared to have increased in Latin America.

The human rights organisa-tion, which won the Nobel peace prize in 1977, also said that in 80 countries worldwide people are jailed for speaking their nunds or for political or religious beliefs.

The review covered abuses in the calendar year 1987.

"In at least a third of the world's nations, men, women and even children are fortured." Amnesty said. "In scores of countries government s pursue their goals by kidnerpoing and murdering their own citizens."

The group said it "documents and publicises this ugly picture of what governments around the world are doing to their citizens 40 years after the proclamation of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights for one reason only - to convince more people that something must be done to stop it.

The report highlighted the fact that this year is the 40th anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. "On tit Dec 1948 all the members of the United Natioos declared for the first time in history that every human being has inalieoable rights." it said.

Amnesty said that today while all the UN members states formally subscribe to the declaration "many of them reveal, by their actions, that they consider their ideas and ideals it enshrines as 'subversive'.

The report said that in Lauo America the use of clandestine groups linked to government forces to terrorise political opposition or common criminals appeared to have increased. Abuses by such groups continned in several countries including. El Salvador, Guatemala, Colombia, Brazil and Chile and reports indicated that similar grous bad emerged in countries previously unaffected such as Panama, Amnesty said.

ABU DHABI, Oct 2, (KUNA): Abu Dhabi's Water and Electricity Department is carrying out field research and scientific studies in collaboration with Japanese experts to ensure the safety of the desalination and power plants from the dangers of oil pollution, a senior official at the department said today.

Saced Attiq, assistant undersecretary at the department, said that following the incident at Iran's Nowruz oilfield, there were direct pollution threats to Abu Dhabi's desalination and power plants, which totally depend on Gulf waters.

ARABIAN architecture, such as old Kuwaiti houses, are a source of historical pride and should be well preserved, says Sbeikha Hessah Sabah Al Salem, the director of the Islamic Monuments House.

"It is important to realise that these bouses are a part of our heritage and it is sad to see them deteriorate and disappear with time," she said.

Old bouses could be changed into cultural centres and art galleries to benefit the public, and efforts should be made to restore them, she said.

A BREATH of fresh air has heen blowing through the Kuwait video business in the nast couple of weeks. First, the new minister of information decreed the issue of new video licences, blocked since 1981, which has led to many hundreds of applications. It is expected that over 100 new shops will open for husiness in the next few months. Secondly, the removal of Coca Cola from the hlacklist has led to the reinstatement of Columbia Pic-

For those of you who think that this will give rise to an avalanche of wonderful movies, let me tell you the bad news — all this year's major releases from Columbia have been total or semi-box office flops, and the studio is in fact in a state of turmoil. Last year, however, it did produce a few good movies, of which the last to be released (and then withdrawn) in Kuwait was the multi-Oscar winner The Last Emperor. The other Columbia Oscar nomince, which did not win any awards, was John Boorman's Hope and Glory. This beautiful and sensitive film was ohviously too autobiographical and possibly too British in content to have mass appeal around the world. Like that other Oscar nominee Empire of the Sun, it tells the slory of a young teenager's war years, this time in the centre of London, and evidently in Boorman's memory, they must have been real fun years. The movie captures the excitement of the German bombing raids — the noise and chaos, the burning houses, and the ruins to sift through in the coming weeks the extra freedoms due to a father absent on duty, and a mother involved in the war effort, and of course the usual teenage goings on, aided and abetted by empty houses and a night-time blackout. Columbia's biggest box office successes in 1987 were two other films — La Bamba and Roxanne.

La Bamba is the story of a teenage pop star Ritchie Valens, whose main claim to fame was a number one revamp of the title song, and his own early rock 'n' roll hit 'Donna'. Valens was a poor Mexican who moved up to California when rock music exploded onto the scene in the late 50's. With his guitar and a few lucky hreaks, he hit the big time at the age of sixteen, only to die one year later in the same air crasb that killed Buddy Holly and the Big Bopper. Personally I regretted both the latter much more than Valens, but there isSteve Martin in Roxanne, the new comedy that updates the classic Cyrano de Bergerac tala.

no denying that the film La Bamha has great teenage appeal due to some good period rock music and dancing, as well as the sad story of another young death - better to burn out than to fade away...'

Roxanne is Steve Martin's latest and possibly the best movie. He plays a latter day Cyrano de Bergerac (the guy with the BIG nose), who like his predecessor falls for the beautiful Roxanne, and will do everything in his power to defend her virtue. In our updated version. Martin is in fact the local fire chief, hut his romantic notions and cavalier attitude soon get him into a series of very amusing scrapes.

Enough of Columbia for one week! One star whom we still cannot see in her top rating TV series is Shelley Long, as Cheers is a Paramount production. She now appears in a new comedy Hello Again, the story of a young woman who dies accidentally and is brought back to life by her sister. In her first life, she is married to a

When she is resurrected, not only has the husband remarried her best friend, hut everybody, she used to know shuns her completely. The jokes are very slapstick and predictable, but apparently it was successful enough as a film to beget a new TV series of the same name, which will be coming to your screens shortly.

everybody's cup of tea -- in fact how many people know exactly what it is? Apparently this brand of table football claims over five million fanatics in 35 countries. In England teams such as Ajax Ramsgate, Real Falkirk and Cosmopolitan Manchester battle it out yearly for the championship. Playing For Real is a new British miniseries, which develops the story of Patricia, who never really got on with her father, but taking over the chairmanship of his team, and with the help of her favourite player, a miniature Charlie Nicholas complete with earrings, takes on the task of winning the league. Cheating, hooliganism, crowds roaring and even choruses of A bide with Me', accompany this deceptively skillful game, and although the series is basically a comedy, there is some attempt to do justice to its fans. Viewers who enjoyed series such as Tutti Frutti, should also appreciate this one.

One other film which has made a reappearance from the blacklist is American Graffiti, the George Lucas/Francis Ford Coppola film which spawned the Happy Days series. Although filmed in 1973, this is still one of the best 'growing up in small town America' films ever made.

Romancing the brain rambling, messy fun has no life, no vavoom! "Ah!

"I THINK I'd like to kiss you, Would you like that?" He asks. "I'd like that very much," she coos. There is only one minor problem. "She" is a disembodied hrain living in a jar. He is a hrilliant hrain-surgeon, trapped in a love-less marriage.

No cause for panic, though. He has come prepared with all the paraphernalia -- a pair of plastic hos, trendy hat and scarf and eatables — for an apparently memorable, romanic outing on the lake

This is just one of several oddities that have you in splits in The Man With Two Brains, an unconventional romantic triangle between a doctor, his wife and a disembodied hrain living in a fishbowl. The hrilliant brain surgeon Michael Hfufhrurr (emphasis on rolling r's) falls in love with the hrain after the "object" responds to his romantic ballad sung in the confines of a "lah" huilt in a condo. Once in love, he starts looking for a "home" for his newfound love - Ms Ullelemeye, or something to that effect.

The hrain, voiced by Sissy Spacek, pronounces his vertrry difficult name correctly, one reason the genius-doctor adores "it" because no one else could "ever say my name correctly." It sounds silly hut there are plenty of laughs, particularly in Dr Necessitator's (David Warner) lah - a seemingly impregnable, fort with walls that are not all that safe as the hapless doctor finds out after shattering one by leaning against it. What does a man do when a sensuous wife (Kathleen Turner) who keeps him at arm's length? Dr Hfufhrurr declares his marriage "null and void" each time she delicately rejects his amorous advances. Frustrated he locks himself in his study - pushed further into the arms of the other woman - or rather the jar falls into the lap of the doctor. But when the wife wants to jump off the huilding, he walks precarionsly on falling debri from a thin ledge some eight floors high — with the woman hanging from his neck. The next moment we see the doctor uttering sweet nothings into the ear of the - well hrain. An "ohject" could, cer-tainly, not satisfy the doctor's erotic fantasies - neither does the wife. So he gets a hrainwave plant the hrain. US vice-president's job

Sometimes important, sometimes ridiculous

By Alexander G. Higgins

WASHINGTON, (AP): The US vice-presidency is a job that has someumes been important, but has just as often been ridiculed as insignificant, even by some of the people who have held it.

Today, vice-presidential rivals Lloyd Bentsen and Dan Quayle face each other in a debate. The debate itself could affect the outcome of the presidential race between Michael Dukakis and George Bush.

But once the election is decided, little may be heard again of the vice-presidential winner as he to its deep in the shadows of the president.

John Nance Garner, Franklin Roosevelt's vice-president in the 1930s, described the vicepresidency as "a spare tire on the automobile of government."

It is mainly as a replacement for the president that the vicepresident becomes important, but in recent decades, presidents have given their vice-presidents more meaningful work. Silence

Otherwise, a term as vice-president can be "four years of silence," said Alban Barkley, vice-president under Harry Truman. The colourful Truman, who moved up from vice-president to president on the death of Roosevelt in 1945, said the office was "about as useful as a cow's fifth teat." And Garner, retired to the plains of west Texas, also used an earthy comparison in writing off the job as "not wortb a bucket of warm spit (saliva)."

Americans vote for a combination of presidential and vicepresidential candidates on one ticket and usually base their decision on their favourite for the Democrats, pointing to Quayle's youth and inexperience, are quick to remind voters that if Bush wins on Nov 8, Quayle would be "only a heartbeat away" from taking over if Bush should die or become incapacitated during his fouryear term.

The scary "heartbeat away" phrase has been used repeatedly since the 1950s to call attenuon to the inadequacy of a vice-presidential candidate and to remind voters that they elect a vice-president as well as a

Eight of the 40 US presidents have died in office and been succeeded by their vice-presidents.

Bentsen, a senator from Texas, was chosen by Dukakis to challenge Bush — also a Texan - in that key state, and he bas been spending much of his time campaigning only there.

In the debate, Quayle could well argue that he and Bentsen hold similar views and agree with the average American voter.

Dukakis and Bentsen bave criticized both Bush and Quayle and asserted that Bush's choice of his running mate demonstrated a lack of the judgement that a president needs for cboosing appointees for the cabinet and other offices.

Busb's refusal to oppose President Ronald Reagan's policies in public, in fact, has left him open to criticism from Dukakis that be failed to avert such mistakes as the Iran-Contra scandal and close ties to Pan-

Mness makes Japanese aware of emperor

By Nao Nakanishi

TOKYO, (Reuter): Emperor Hirohito's illness has brought him to the forefront of Japanese media attention and made many people, especially the young, aware of a man they knew about only dimly.

Some analysis, tooking back to the nationalistic mood before World War II, have expressed "I fear something similar to the pre-war period could hap-pen," Inada Nada, a psychiatrist and author, told Reuters. He said Japan's media had looked only for respectful reactions to the itiness and did not report dissenting views.

Toshihiko Hara, a sociologist at Tokai University, agreed.

"If you give as much coverage as we see now, you can mobilise the people on any matter. I imagine it was like this during the war when Japan's people were forced to devote their life to the emperor." he said. Sympathy

Hara said many young people were going to the palace to register their sympathy for Hirohito because it was fashionable. Older people were cancelling social events as they did not want to stand out in Japan's conformist society.

More than two million people, young and old, have braved persistent rain and long queues to sign registers at the Imperial Palace in central Tokyo and else-

Throughout Japan, events ranging from traditional harvest festivals, sports meetings at schools, political fund-raisers, department store sales and even marriages have been cancelled or postponed out of respect for the emperor.

Until recently, many of Japan's t20 million people did not give the 87-year-old emperor much thought, especially the young who were not brought up to consider him a divine ruler. For most he was a frail old man with an interest in marine biology who rarely emerged from a curtain skilfully woven by the conservative bureaucrats of the Imperial Household Agency.

Interrupt

The situation changed when Hirohito collapsed on Sept 19. Television stations interrupt their programmes every hour to report what little information they have on his condition.

Newspapers are filled with medical stausucs, doctors' comments and pictures of the queues of well-wishers and subjects who kneel in the mud outside the palace moat to pray for the world's longest reigning mon-

Hara said that people who feel betrayed hy the emperor through their experiences either during and after the war or during the student movement of the 1960s — probably have a cynical reaction but this is not seen and reported so easily.

After seven years in power

By John Rogers

CAIRO, (Reuters): Hosni Mubarak starts his eighth year as president of Egypt this week, picking his way through political minefields which appear ever more dangerous.

But the 60-year-old former Air Force commander, noted for stolid plain speaking rather than dramatic gestures, seems unlikely to alter his approach.

Caution remains the ballmark of his domestic policy as he seeks to contain Islamic militancy and grapples with worsening economic problems which threaten to spark social unrest.

"He wants to maintain a moderate, centrist state that is freer than most in the Arah world," said a Western diplomat. But the worse the economy gets. the more difficult his job is.

Backing

In foreign relations, he bas presided over Egypt's return to acceptability in the Arab world after nearly a decade as an outcast because of its peace pact with Israel. He has retained close ties with the West and improved relations with Moscow.

Foreign backing is unportant economic crisis. Gulf Arab states are now pumping more aid and investment money into Egypt, while Mubarak has carefully nurtured US and West European Both Egyptian and foreign analysts say he likes to rule hy consensus. Most foreigners see this as a strength, but some Egyptians regard compromise decision-making as a weakness.

They recall Egypt's dramas under strongman Gamal Abdel Nasser, who nationalised the Suez Canal, or Anwar Sadat, who flouted Arab opinion to establish relations with Israel. Fairer Nonetheless, Egyptians accept Mubarak - or at least have concluded there is no obvious alternative to the stocky, dour vicepresident who was thrust to power when Muslim zealots gunned down Sadat on Oct 6, 1981.

A potential successor could be Field Marshal Abdel-Halim Abu Ghazala, the defence minister. But Western diplomats say he shows no open interest in power and appears content to run the huge military machine which underpins the government.

Mubarak's supporters say he runs a fairer, less oppressive system than his predecessors, allowing the opposition a greater say in parliament and through its newspapers, although the ruling National Democratic Party has a crushing legislative majority.

Opposition outside parliament is kept in check by emergency laws, renewed recently for three years, which empower police to detain suspects without Interior Minister Zaki Badr keeps a tight rein on protests by Muslim activists and other dissidents. The opposition accuses Badr, a former police general, of using excessive force.

Five people were killed in clashes between Muslim militants and police in Cairo in August. Socialist Ibrahim Sbukri, who heads the small left-Islamic opposition in the people's assem-bly, says Mubarak listens too much to his aides and too little to ordinary people. "Maybe it's because of his previous experience as a pilot. He take readings," Shukri told Reuters in an interview. "Now. before taking a decision he has to take all the readings first.

"All his decisions are trying to balance the situation. Sometimes decisions have to be taken that unbalance the situation but are the right decisions."

Balance

Mubarak has turned consensus-based caution into government policy in meeting his biggest challenge — reforming the economy without igniting street riots. He aims to prevent Muslim fundamentalists and other pressure groups exploiting grumbles over rising prices.

He envisages reforms over 10 years and sees no quick fix for problems which include high population growth, $ 40 billion of foreign debt, a legacy of slugg-ish state industries and subsidies on vital goods and reliance on slumping oil prices for dollar income.

The International Monetary Fund (1MF), whose aid is vital to Egypt, wants faster action to raise energy prices towards world levels, reduce the hudget deficit and increase consumer

"I can't raise prices at one time by 40 per cent because nobody would be able to survive. Mubarak said after recent inconclusive negotiations on an IMF aid package." It would not be an IMF operation, it would be slaughter."

Accused

He accused the Fund of behaving like a quack doctor trying to force a single huge dose down Egypt's throat rather than a daily

Egypt views itself as a special case because of its strategic location at the junction of Europe. the Middle East and Africa, its control of the Suez Canal and its role as the only Arab state pledged to peace with Israel.

For years, this argument has found favour in Western chanceries. Egypt last year won IMF standby balance of payments help on exceptionally soft terms and rescheduled more than So billion in official debt instalments to the West.

Although Cairo later tailed to Egypt's 52 million people, many desperately poor, have so far accepted gradual price rises blamed hy the opposition on IMF demands.

But grumbling is increasing. When Mubarak scrapped the usual September bonus paid to every family for start-of-term school expenses, textile workers went on strike for two days.

The introduction of better quality bread from government bakeries costing five piastres (2.5 cents) - more than double the old lower quality loaf -- was widely seen as a way to raise the price of the poor man's heavily subsidised staple food.

Egyptians appears stoically to accept tough conditions most of the time. But, in a volatile country, the future is unpredictable.

War in Afghanistan

By Adam Keilihar

KABUL, Afghanistan, (UPI): US made Stingers and similar anti-aircraft missiles changed the nature of the war in Afghanistan and are believed to be a key factor in Moscow's decision to withdraw its troops after a nine-year struggle. Soviet and Afgban pilots developed a variety of tactics and countermeasures in an attempt to lessen the threat from the Stingers, British-made "Blowpipes", and captured Soviet "Sam-7s" but never were able to successfully blunt the threat posed by the bigh-tech weapons.

The Stingers are over there, beyond those first mountains, said Jamaluddin, as he directed his Yak-40 passenger jet in a tight upward spiral. They usually do not fire at civilian planes, but today they may be in a bad mood."

Afghan and Soviet officials said seven civilian aircraft have been downed by Stingers, but gave no figures of the toll of military aviation. Western diplomats in Pakistan estimated more than 250 aircraft had been downed by the missiles.

The innocuous-looking Stinger is a 5-foot green pipe with an electronic firing mechanism. Total weight, 33 pounds. Its heat-seeking projectile has a 3mile range and, according to experts, 70 per cent accuracy against any aircraft that strays within its sight inside a 30-degree

Two Stingers — captioned as "tethal gifts of President Reagan"—are among captured weapons at Kabul's war museum, along with one Blowpipe, a heavier device with a shorter range but regarded as more accurate due to its advanced acoustic homing system.

"This works like a computer." said Afghan Brig. Sayed Hahihullah, hoisting a Stinger onto his shoulder. "You just push the button and shoot."

The Stinger generally can be fired with impunity and surprise. Soviet soldiers said rebels frequently launch the rocket and then disappear into a "khareez," an ancient system of irrigation tunnels.

Soviet and Afghan authorities have responded with a variety of countermeasures.

As Jamaluddin demonstrated, pilots ascend in tight corkscrews above airport to avoid flying over rebel-controlled territory until they reach a safe 23,000 feet (7,000m).

Military aircraft spew out numerous flares and engine exhaust nozzles have been redirected upwards to try to confuse a Stinger's infrared tracking device. Analysts said the Soviets have placed armoured mesh around some engines to absorb and survive the blast of Stinger, which does not carry a very powerful charge.

OSLO, (Reuter): A book revealing Norway's deep involvement in international espionage dur-ing the "cold war" period of the 1950s and 1960s has started a debate about secrecy in one of the world's most open societies.

The book, "Our Secret
Preparations," details bow Norway used seamen in its huge merchant fleet as agents. It also reveals Norway's role in elaborate operations to spy on communist states at the request of US and British intelligence.

Defence authorities have said that the author, a former officer in Norwegian intelligence, may be prosecuted for breaching a lifelong vow of silence about his

"I did not show the manuscript to (head of the armed for-ces) Vigleik Eide, because he would have had it banned," author Christian Christensen told a news conference to launch the book in Oslo recently.

Interviaws Christensen, a 66-year-old former major in intelligence, based his book chiefly on interviews with Alf Martens Meyer, who led most Norwegian spy operations in the 1950s and 1960s.

Meyer, now 80 and living in retirement in Spain, was Navy captain in intelligence. His responsibilities in what was then a very small set-up was to organise sensitive assignments. The book has brought embarrassing allegations that officers involved knowingly broke with government security policy and that they kept successive administrations ignorant of certain sensitive missions.

Christensen, writing about the years between 1948 and 1968 when superpower tensions almost boiled over, gives key details of a number of alleged episodes in his book:

Nusrat Bhutto said in an interview on Monday. 'If it had not been on a party basis there would have been so many symbols it would have caused confusion and chaos. It was certainly good news." Welcomed The government of acting President Ghulam Isbaq Khan accepted the ruling, which was not unexpected, with good grace. Benazir hailed the decision as 'historic" and it was welcomed by all opposition parties.

Lodbi said it was likely to increase the "bandwagon effect" in favour of the PPP which began with the death in a mystery plane crash on Aug 17 of the party's mortalenemy, military President Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq. Zia ousted Benazir's father Zulfikar Ali Bhutto in a coup in 1977 and presided over his hanging. The analysts said she could never have prospered politically while he remained in power. "Most important is likely to be the psychological effect (of the court decision)." Lodhi said. "The PPP's winner image is going to be enhanced. Even before the court decision, 18,000 people bad applied for PPP party tickets for the 237 National Assembly seats and 460 places in the four provincial assemblies, Nusrat said. "After the judgment more will come, all those who were sitting on the fence," she said. The ruling was a direct con-tradiction of Zia's wishes. He presided over widely-boycotted non-party elections in 1985 and had said the November polls too should be on a non-party basis.

It was the second judicial snub in a week to the late military ruler. The Lahore High Court earlier ruled that he acted illegally when be dismissed the National Assembly in May. The PPP's main opponents are expected to be the Pakistan Muslim League (FIDA) headed by Zia appointees still in office, especially the four provincial chief ministers.

1shaq Kban bas rejected opposition demands that they be sacked to prevent any election rigging. But fears of a postponement or cancellation seem to be Delaying

Justice Minister Wasim Sajjad ruled out the idea of delaying the polls at a news conference on Sunday. More significantly in a country ruled by the military for more than half its existence, Army chief General Mirza Aslam Beg has promised to ensure that free and fair elections go ahead on schedule.

"I believe him and I think It is clear they will go ahead on time." Nusrat Bhutto said. She described Beg's performance since he succeeded Zia as chief of Army staff as "excellent, Benazir is due to resume active campaigning in a few days, following the Caesarian birth of her first child on Sept 21. "She has been on the telephone all the time, she is full of beans," her mother said. The birth has not only freed Pakistan's biggest crowd-puller to campaign energetically but also provided the Bbutto "dynasty" with an heir.

The charisma of the executed prime minister is still at the heart of the PPP's appeal to poor Pak-istanis and his portrait dominates party rallies.

 Norwegian authorities ave permission for the top secret US U2 spy plane to be based in northern Norway, but were not told that it conducted missions inside the Soviet Union.

Embarrassed

Martens Meyer knew this, but did not report it to the government. When a U2 crashed in the Soviet Union in 1960, sparking an international furore, the news deeply embarrassed the Norwegian government.

Newspapers have alleged that the use of civilians for spying and conducting operations outside the boundaries of the NATO alliance were a clear hreach of Norwegian policy, and that governments were kept in the dark about what was going on.
"The revelations are embarrassing." wrote Verdens Gang, Norway's biggest selling newspaper. in a recent editorial which called for a government inquiry into the

Dear Mrs Cuddihy, Your son is in 4th grade now. In the intermediate school we try to instil in the children a sense of dressing properly. May we therefore please remind you that shorts are no longer

Dear Mrs Mannequin,

I have received your note with some surprise (my son doesn't usually debver notes from teachers). The contents of the note were even more surprising. Are you insinuating that when my son wears shorts he is improperly dressed? I admit his legs are a bit spindly, but they're usually moving so fast that surely no one would actually get a visual fix on them. And I can assure you that his wardrobe of brand new shorts is far more presentable than his rattytatty collection of hand-medown jeans. We keep them because they seem to be the fashion with young boys, and this is certainly what I see many of the other children wearing to school. I've checked with their mothers and they baven't received any notes reminding them to garb their sons "properly". I can therefore only question your judgement on what is proper" dressing. Concerning the dress code for P.E., my son has lived all his little life in ripperless shorts. He's immensely proud to finally qualify for sborts "like

I suppose my cooperation is inevitable, but don't count on its Grudgingly, P.S. Are there any tall 3rd grade children who still dress improperly and might. be able to use 8 pairs of impeccable shorts (with zippers)?

Dear Mrs Cuddihy,

I have to admit, my curiosity bas finally got the better of me: have you signed any homework sheets/permission slips/ absentee forms for your son lately?

The reason I ask is that dne to a recently discovered talent displayed by your son, we are led to believe that your signature is not actually yours. Today we caught the boy submitting a forged note to his gym teacher excusing him from class due to health reasons. We got suspicious when they note was written on scrap paper with frayed edges ... and when it cited "preminstral tension" as the cause of the "illness".

We are alarmed that the forgery is such good quality and feel that you should be informed urgently. We have taken disciplinary action at school but you will probably agree that parental involvement is also required.

Yours sincerely, J.L. Warden

Dear Warden,

 Did you really send me a note yesterday, or was that one of my son's clever tricks? The handwriting certainly looks yours, so'I'll take a chance and reply.

Aside from the fact that yours is supposed to be a progressive school which should encourage any and all talents in the children under your care, I do feel that your concerns are misplaced. Who cares about forged homework slips, etc? What I have to find out is wbether the little genius bas been using my cheque book!

With alarm, P.S. If my son doesn't bother to deliver this note to you, perhaps you could call and let me know. Maybe you'd better call anyway, just in case in the note he delivers isn't the note I wrote. Dear Mrs Cuddihy,

Due to your son's unseemly behaviour in class, I must regrettably inform you that I feel it would be best if be stays bome tomorrow. This 'cooling down" period should give him a chance to reflect on the foolishness of his mischievous activities.

I am the first to admit that there is a time and place for everything, but this certainly does not include placing a cardboard shoe box (with a very loosefitting lid) FULL OF COCKROACHES under my desk.

Perhaps you can do something to stifle the child's fertile imagination. Please be aware that if these pranks continue, the next suspension may be permanent!

Yours sincerely, Mrs Mannequin 4th Grade

Dear Mrs Mannequin, You are probably wondering wby my son is bringing you this note when he is supposed to stay at home today. I can only ask, Whom are you trying to punish?

If my son stays home on a school day without the excuse of being sick, I am the one who will suffer. Apart from the fact that 1 will bave to interrupt my work to feed him at regular (and frequent) intervals, I will probably bave to entertain him so that 1) he doesn't get into more trouble; 2) he doesn't spend the day whinning that "there's nothing to do." I would probably also be stuck with my daughter because she would keep crying "It's not fair that he gets to stay home and I don't until I would have to give in just for a bit of

Rare examples of Roman correspondence

New light on Roman life in Britain

Recently discovered Roman tablets on which the ink writing is still legible present a picture of Roman life in which socialising and obtaining supplies of luxury items loom much larger than any military preoccupations.

By Chris Tighe

DISCOVERIES made during excavations at the Northumberland fort of Vindolanda in the UK, a mile to the south of Hadrian's Wall, have shed new light on the Romans' life in the northern outpost of their empire, 1,900 years ago.

Because of the preservative properties of its turf, Vindolanda has yielded up more than 1,000 Roman tablets pieces of wafer-thin wood on which the ink writing is still legible.

These texts, the earliest archive of written material found in Britain, present a picture of Roman life in which socialising and obtaining supplies of luxury items loom much larger than any military preoccupations.

And among the text is a four-page, 45-line letter, among the longest original Roman letters ever found, which challenges the image of the Romans as masterroad huilders in AD 115. Octavius, whose status is unknown, writes from an unknown address to Vindolanda to complain that he is still awaiting delivery of grain and cattle-hides and laments the bad state of the roads. They are unfit for wheeled traffic, he says.

Complains
Octavius also complains about the delay in receiving large quantities of cattle-hides from Catterick - Cataractonia — and grain, for which he has already paid. If he does not get the supplies, he says, he will be financially embarrassed. He adds that as the roads are bad, mules may be the best means of

"This was very early in the Romans' occupation of northero Britain," says Dr David Thomas of Durham Univer-sity's Department of Paleogra-phy and Diplomatic, a papyrologist who has tran-slated many of the Vindolanda tahlets together with Dr Alan Bowman, of Oxford University.

Dr Thomas said: "One would hope that in London and Colchester the roads would be much better, hut up here, where they had conquered only 20 years previously, they were just Vindoland's director, Mr Robin Birley, and his excavation assistants have also just unearthed a pridianum, or periodic strength report, the first such document found in the Western Empire.

Written on a specially prepared thin sheet of oak, it reports that more than a dozen men from the cohort of Tungrians attached to Vindolanda at the time of writing, shortly

Another tablet found at Vindolanda is a rare example of correspondence between Roman women, presumahly both wives of senior soldiers. In the letter, Flavia Severa is inviting Lepedina to her birthday

Another tablet, bearing two excerpts from Virgil, seems to be a writing exercise hy a child, probably one of the sons of Flavius Cerialis, prefect of the Ninth Cohort of Batavians based before AD 103 at Vindolanda.

have nothing compared with this written material except the papyrus finds from Roman Egypt at the other end of the Empire."

This is a period of history, between the departure of the governor, Agricola, in AD 84 and the arrival of Hadrian in AD 122, for which, by accident, there have been no surviving Roman sources at all," says Mr Birley, who has run Vindolanda, a charitable trust, for the last 20 years.

"We are now getting a vast amount of information about the period. There are at least 600 different hands on the Vindolanda tablets; it was a very literate society at that stage.

Aztec human sacrificial altar stone discovered

By Susanne Sternthal

MEXICO CITY, (UPI): Archaeologists call it one of the most important finds of the Aztec culture — a huge, cir-cular-shaped carved stone used for human sacrifice.

"It was a sacrificial stone with a double function, used both to celebrate a war victory upon which the Aztecs sacrificed a captured warrior, and for human sacrifice during religious rites to the Sun God, said Guillermo Perez Castro co-ordinator of the archaeological dig.

The stone, believed to date from about 1460, is still in a gaping square hole smelling of freshly dug earth in the middle of a Spanish colonial courtyard at the heart of the former Around its perimeter are 11 scenes depicting conquests of 11 different tribes by Aztec warriors. In each, an Aztec warrior costumed like a god is shown holding a captured prisoner by the hair.

"In the Mexica (Aztee) religion, the primary god, the Sun God. was believed to be nourished hyhuman sacrifice, Perez said at the edge of the pit. "In order for the sun to rise, the Sun God had to be fed by the blood and the hearts of

The heart was pul into a centre hollow, representing the mouth of the Sun God. From it the blood flowed in rivulets, defining the etched rays of the sun in red, and animating the symbols of stars, eagle feathers and water, Perez explained.

The chance find of the 8- to 12-ton volcanic stone monolith, nearly 3 feet (1 metre) thick and 7 feet (2 metre) in diameter, could throw new light on the mysterious Aztec culture, the archaeologists said.

"This piece will give us greater and more exact understanding of this period of the Mexica," said Pedro Francisco Sanchez, chief archaeologist of the National Institute of

"This piece is extremely important. I believe it is one of the most important found in the Mexica culture, definitely," Sanchez said.

The Aztecs founded Tenochtitlan, where Mexico City now stands, in 1325. This marked the beginning of an empire that flourished for nearly 200 years, until the Spanish conquest in

Because the conquistadors demolished Tenochulan and constructed their city on top of its ruhhle, much of the Aztec culture still remains buried under Spanish colonial huildings in the centre of Mexico

On June 27, two archaeologists from the National Institute of Archaeology, Maria E. Judith Padilla Y Yedra and Antonio Gudino Garfias, began routine excavations to investigate the cracking foundation of an 18th century huilding now used as Finance Ministry offices. On July 1, the stone was discovered in the huilding's

Search for lost Columbus ships

By Jeff Franks

HOUSTON, (Reuter): In the mouth of the murky river in Panama, marine archaeolog-ists are searching for the remains of a ship that Christopher Columbus sailed on his final voyage to the new world.

The researchers say they have found evidence — still inconclusive — that the Gallega, a small ocean-going vessel Columbus left behind when it became stranded on a sand har, lies in the Rio Belen's mouth in 20 to 30 feet (seven to 10 metres) of water.

"We have found places that warrant further investigation," said Denise Lakey, a researcher for the Texas A and M university-based Institute of Nautical Archaeology.

In 1503, Columbus was on his fourth and final voyage to the new world that he had discovered a decade before. He was seeking a passage to India through the Western hemisphere when he and his crew stopped hriefly at the point now being searched on the Western Atlantic coast of Panama. Little is known about the Gallega, a caravel-class ship that sailed too close to the beach and got stuck on a sand bar, Lakey said. Columbus left the boat and a small contingent behind with the intention of setting up a trading station. But a group of Indians, fearful of the Spaniards, attacked.

The men fled into the ocean made their way to a boat beyond the sand bar and sailed to safety, leaving the Gallega

Records about the ship and its location survived in reports on Columbus's expedition and in testimony in subsequent lawsuits his descendants filed against Spain in an attempt to stake their claim to the wealth of the new World, Lakey said.

Probably of more interest to tourists, the 19th-century fort bearing the same name, on a hill literally across the road, has been largely restored.

Yet finds among the hroken pottery of Kot Diji (about 350 miles north of Karachi, in Pakistan's Sind province) show that it dates back nearly 5,000 years - to 2,800 BC - predating hy about 300 years the better-known Harappa and Moenjodaro archaeological sites in the same region.

These remains provide the major sources of information about the early Indus Valley civilization, also known as the Harappan culture, which ranks with early civilization of Egypt, Mesopotamia, and the Huang Ho Valley in China.

The much better preserved site at Moenjodaro was partly excavated by the British in 1922. A highly developed city of 50,000, with wide streets, two-story dwellings, large civic and religious structures, and even an extensive brick-lined sewage system, was uncovered.

A small but well-maintained museum of artifacts on the site at Moenjodaro includes personal seals, the original sig-natures, bearing the image of an animal or human form, and sparse examples of so far untranslated writings.

FAMILY DOCTOR BY DR ALLAN BRUCKHEIM

QUESTION: What can be causing my shoulder pain? The pain is always there, hut

ANSWER: The shoulder joint is the most versatile joint in the body, possessing an enormous range of motion. It allows us to perform strenuous tasks such as lifting and throwing, as well as simple manual tasks like writing or sewing. Because of its anatomical complexity, however, a trade-off is made. The shoulder's extraordinary range of motion, a great advantage for many activities, is counter-balauced by an instability that makes it subject to injury.

Since countless causes can be involved, the first step in diagnosing the problem is to determine the exact location of the pain. Many factors must be considered, including whether bones, muscles, tendons, ligaments, hlood vessels or nerves are involved. The more acute the problem, the more likely the patient can pinpoint it.

How the pain started is important to determine as well. Knowing if there was an injury or if the pain came on gradually is a key point in a diagnostic evaluation. If certain movements cause pain or are impossihle to perform, they should be noted, as should any movements that relieve the pain. Swelling, burning, tingling or numbness in the arm will influence the diagnosis as well. Knowing the type of activity a person engages in is also a key factor when diagnosing a shoulder ailment. For example, sedentary activities such as writing, typing or sewing force shoulder muscles to contract. Prolonged engagement in such tasks can cause shoulder spasms. Exercising to stretch the muscles can prevent the problem and should be performed because if the joint is not allowed to move freely, it can "freeze" and cause the formation of fibrotic adhesions.

On the other hand, strenuous activities such as swimming or overhead work causes certain tendons to stretch and compress. Such violent, repetitive action may traumatize the tendon and its sheath, producing pain. Other possible causes of shoulder pain can include chronic inflammation of a shoulder joint that may develop if a shoulder injury doesn't heal properly or if the joint is strenuously worked and ahused. Even years after an injury, simple activities such as rolling on the shoulder during sleep may cause pain, tenderness and spasms. Arthritis, tension, fibrositis and bone calcification are still further possible causes of chronic shoulder pain.

If you are suffering from undiagnosed shoulder pain, I suggest that you see a physician in hopes of determining the cause. Simple, five-minute examinations have been designed to quickly pinpoint possible causes, and it's certainly worth your while to investigate them. Relief can be readily achieved in many cases. ACROSS MY DESK: Fact or fiction?

Women take more medications than men do. We can ohtain some idea from research from the University of Wisconsin, where the the results of interviews of 862 men and women about their prescriptions drugs showed that women do take about twice the number of medications that men do. It's likely that some of the difference is due to factors such as the use of contraceptives, iron supplements, vaginal medications and prenatal vitamins, but researchers felt that these needs were not sufficient to completely explain the difference.

Soviet newspaper admits

MOSCOW, Oct 4. (Reuter): A Soviet newspaper on Thursday released figures which give the lie to the official line that prices of basic commodities have been stable for decades in the Soviet Union. In a new twist to a long-running debate over price reform set for the early 1990s, Trud said a parliamentary commission found prices of staples like bread, potatoes and other vegetables rose by up to 18 per cent in the last two years. "Price rises were responsible for 60 per cent of the entire increase in trade turnover in 1986 and 1987," the Trade Union newspaper said. Trud also made clear prices had been rising for much longer a fact apparent to most Soviet citizens but long denied by afficial statistics which masked many rises simply by reclassifying products as they became more expensive. "Today's rouble is worth just 42 kopecks compared with the rouble of 1960," the newspaper said. However, Trud did not give enough details to allow reliable calculation of an annual Soviet rate of inflation. Although the prices of staples in the Soviet Union are still far lower than in the West, so too are wages, with figures released last month showing the average Russian family spends as much as 59 per cent of its income on food. Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev has warned the population to expect increases in the price of staples at the start of the 1990s as a necessary part of an overhand of the centrally-planned

Soviet economy. Radical economists have said state price subsidies should be ended, arguing they distort the economy and take no account of consumer demand. Some of these products are in such short supply in state shops that people are niten forced to go to cooperative enterprises or markets where they can cost double or triple the official prices. However, many newspaper articles and letters have suggested the reform will be unpopular, expressing fears it is bound to cut living standards.

Banks clear Kuwaiti dinar short-term position

A LOCAL daily reported yester-day that local banks cleared their Knwaiti dinar short-term position on Monday.

It added that the banks began expanded purchasing of US dollars in anticipation of a change in the currencies which determine the price of the Local bankers showed that the sharp increase of the US dollar against the Kuwaiti dinar at the beginning of last month caused fears about such a change.

Rate

They said that the Central Bank increased the exchange rate of the US dollar against the Kuwaiti dinar to 288.96 fils on Monday morning, although its price retreated against major currencies the same day.

This created a sense of unease among local banks, which began building short-term financial positions in the US dollar from the middle of last week.

They added that this became very sharp on Monday and the rush to purchase US dollars in the local market led to the increased interest rate on the Kuwaiti dinar, which rose from 3 per cent on Sunday to 6 per cent on Monday. The bankers pointed out that the Central Bank did not intervene in the local markets on Monday and did not withdraw liquidity from markets to force local banks to stop speculation on the Kuwaiti dinar.

The Central Bank sees this speculation as exaggerated and harmful, they said.

Kuwalt holds 5.1pc stake in UK bank

LONDON, Oct 4, (AP): The Kuwait Investment Office, the London-based investment arm of the Kuwaiti government said yesterday it holds a 5.1 per cent stake in Midland Bank Ple.

In a statement lodged with London's Stock Exchange, the Kuwait. Investment. Office, which also holds a stake of about 20 per cent in British Petroleum Co. Plc, said it bought 1.5 million Midland shares on Friday. That lifted its bolding to 28.04 million sbares, or above 5 per cent,

'Dealing with building materials is high risk'

Local market unstable, say dealers

By Jadranka Porter

KUWAIT'S dealers in building materials are being flooded with inquiries from Iraq, hut few orders are being placed as the Iragis shop around the Gulf to meet their urgent requirements for plywood, steel and timber, according to traders in Kuwait.

The local market is unstable, they say, and most dealers are refraining from placing new orders. Local market prices of wood remain stable, while steel is getting cheaper. Profits are on decline while the competition is getting more intense, they say.

The uncertainty surrounding Iraqi orders is further underlined hy the rising value of the dollar against the Kuwaiti dinar which is eating into the dealers' profits. Building material prices are quoted in dollars in the international market. Charges Dealers are also delaying orders because they expect to receive supplies at cheaper rates once the freight charges drop. The ceasefire in the Iraq-Iran war has encouraged it any shippers to resume traffic to Kurwait and the freight charges are expec-ted to gradually decline from the Dealers find it difficult to assess lrag's immediate requirements on the basis of their inquiries, said Burud.

"The Iraqis have been sending the same inquiries to different companies in Kuwait and elsewhere in the Gulf, raising the level of competition," he said. From July 18 when Iran said it was willing to negotiate peace in the Gulf war until the end of August the flow of orders, especially for plywood, from Iraq was steady, said Burud. Since then exports to Iraq resumed and there bave been inquiries for large quantities of plywood and sieel, but Burnd said after quoting the price he received no response.

He said that two months ago Iraq placed an order for 100,000 sheets of teak face 4 mm thick plywood. Forty thousand sheets were delivered immediately.

Kuwait's dealers have substantially reduced imports of steel from Qatar and Saudi Arahia, the major suppliers, as they faced difficulties in selling their stocks.

Kuwait had an inquiry from Iraq for more than 100,000 tons of steel, but after dealers quoted the price which included a nominal profit margin there was no response, said Burud.

He found out that Qatar's steel manufacturers received the same Kuwaii's dealers have imported steel expecting a rising demand from Iraq which did not

"Qatar was ready to supply us with 20,000 tons of steel in November, but we had to turn down the offer because of uncertain market conditions," said Burud.

Profits on steel sales are marginal, said Burud. The company makes a profit upto KD 3 per cubic metre of wood, but sales of softwood have been slow. Al Sarrafs have a stock of 15,000 tons of softwood ordered from the Soviet Union in anticipation of brisk trade with Iraq.

Ahmed Jammal of Shuwaikh Trading Co. said dealing with huilding materials is a high risk, low profit husiness. He said net profits ranged between 2 and 6 per cent. He warned dealers against stocking up on huilding materials because of the fluctuating prices and because storage itself is expensive.

Burud said that since the beginning of this year the numher of dealers in huilding materials increased as expectations of an end to the Gulf war rose. This lead to fierce competition on the market. The newcomers faced slow sales and began undercutting prices forcing larger companies to lower their prices.

UNITED NATIONS, Oct 4, (AP): The Philippine foreign chedule and forgive Third World debt and hranded the United States a "hegemnnic power" that could ease the debt crisis but has not done so. Raul S. Manglapus, Secretary of Foreign Affairs, devoted his entire speech to the General Assembly to cond tion of the economic policies of the industrialised North for supposedly perpetuating and increasing the debt of the developing world in the South. "It is valoable to reschedule debt," be said. "But it is even more precious and human to fargive debt." He proposed an international debt and development comm new, 5-year agency to evaluate alternative plans for global debt management. Its staff would be drawn from other global financial agencies and the Philippine envoy proposed it devise concrete actions to rectify inequities in the global trading system. The ommission, he said, would develop standards for debt relief or debt forgiveness and propose them to the United Nations for "approval, proclamation and execution." Manglapus blamed the poverty of the Philippines on ruthless Nurthern creditor natious. gullible developing nations in the South and the dictatorship of former Philippine President, Ferdinand Marcos. "There is one begemonic power today that could crack the whip, the United States of America," he said. "But the crisis is enormous and there are rising economic powers with which the enforcer must coordinate if order and resolution are to be reached. This is not happening," he said. Manglapus made no reference to specific foreign policy questions, like US military bases in the Philippines, or to domestic issues. The debt crisis, he said, is a problem not only for the debtor. "It is a problem for the creditor, a problem for the world. Therefore, the solution cannot be sectoral. It must be total. It cannot be regional, it must be global.

BANGKOK, Oct 4, (Reuter): Burma's economy has been too badly damaged by weeks of anti-government strikes to resume even its previously morihund performance soon. Western diplomats said today.

Indiscriminate Army killings of civilians have dimmed chances the two-week old military leader-ship will get much help at home or from ahroad for recovery, the envoys interviewed by telephone said in Rangoon.

"They now have an economy that is not moving at all. Work in the countryside is going on but production of manufactured goods - which was at a low level anyway — or of anything expor-table will be very very difficult." one Western envoy said.

Most workers of the tightly controlled state economy went back to work hy the Monday deadline set hy general Saw Maung's government, ending a general strike begun in August. Change

There is no great amount of ohvious work being done, hut that isn't much change from before," another diplomat said. Buses hurning Army petrol plied their routes, shops were open and markets did hrisk business to give a sense of return to normality in this city of 3.5

State bureaux and corporations were staffed but practically idle. Troops control Rangoon to stop looting, to enforce a curfew and a ban on demonstrations, and to search people, vehicles and homes for weapons and antigovernment tracis.

Television has shown extensive damage to factories and offices since the abortive national revolt against militarybacked rule erupted in early August. Much equipment has been wrecked, warehouse stocks looted, and office files rifled.

Diplomats reported extensive damage to the timber and fisheries corporations and Min-istry of Trade. Anti-government workers are believed to have done much of the damage, however, witnesses saw many cases of looting hy soldiers.

"A lot of factories have been damaged, such as textile and pharmaceutical factories there is no raw material to make medicines, hiscuits, etc," an envoy said.

Difficult "They are not going to have any money really for purchasing things like replacement spare parts. If they can't do that and they are not getting aid then to get the economy moving at all is going to be very difficult." Doctors, diplomats and dissidents said the Tatmadaw people's defence forces — has killed more than 1,000 people, most of them innocent civilians including children and women.

Killings and other human rights ahuses confirmed by the foreign diplomatic corps even before the Army ended peaceful demonstrations for democracy resulted in suspension of aid by Japan, the United States and West Germany.

The government had estimated a third of its capital spending for 1988-89 would be given by foreign donors.

Wall Street Market Report

NEW YORK, Oct 4: (Reuter): Wall Street stocks remained mixed but Pillsbury and inco were the most active issues.

Analysts said the gains of those companies' shares gave the market a firm tone, but that soft bond prices and worry about Friday's jobs report prevented a broad-based advance. The Dow was up five at 2110 but a few more issues showed losses than gains. Trading was fairly slow. Pillsbury soared 18-3/4 to 57-3/4 following a 60-dollar a share lender offer from Grand Met. Inco rose 2-1/4 to 31-1/4 on its plan for a special dividend totalling $1 billion, partly as a protection against a takeover, analysts said.

Tokyo Stock Market Report

TOKYO STOCKS CLOSE DOWN, BUT HEAR DAY'S HIGHS TOKYO, OCT 4, REUTER - SHARE PRICES ENDED THE DAY EASIER BUT NEAR THEIR HIGHS IN A SESSION PARTLY PARALYSED SY A

WAIT-AND-SEE MOOD, BROKERG SAID.
"THERE HAS BEEN NO AMMOUNCEMENT ABOUT WHAT WILL HAPPEN IF THE EMPEROR SHOULD PASS AWAY. NO ONE WANTS TO GET STUCK IN THIS MARKET IF IT SHUTB DOWN ON THEM," SAID CRAIS CHUDLER, A MARKET STRATEGIST AT SMITH NEW COURT FAR EAST.

"THIS IS EXACERBATED BECAUSE OF THE HOLIDAY WEEKEND HERE AND THE U.S. UNEMPLOYMENT FIGURES ON FRIDAY," HE SAID. THE HIKKEI INDEX SHED 44.51 POINTS, OR O.16 PCT, TO 27,501.02. IT FINISHED 154.60 POINTS LOWER ON MONDAY. TURNOVER WAS A MODERATE 950 MLH SHARES AGAINST 650 MLH ON

THE FIRST SECTION, OR TOKYO STOCK PRICE INDEX, TOPIK, ROSE 4.00 POINTS TO 2,129.78 AFTER A 9.84-POINT LOSS ON MONDAY.

DECLIHERS WERE LED BY ELECTRICAL, PHARMACEUTICAL, SECURITIES HOUSE, COMMUNICATIONS, BANK, RETAIL, MAREHOUSE AND SOME MANUFACTURING ISSUES.

GAS, ELECTRIC POWER, REAL ESTATE, RAILWAY/BUS, AUTO. SHIPBUILDING, AIRLINE, TRUCKING, SHIPPING AND FISHERY STOCK LED THE GAINERS.

SHARE PRICES BEGAN THE DAY SLIGHTLY EASIER WITH THE INDEX AT A PEAK OF 27,531.76. THEY CONTINUED TO FALL TO A LOW OF 27.333.24 AT MID-MORHING, BUT HAD RECOUPED MOST LOSSES JUST TOWARD THE CLOSE.

"IT'S A DISAPPOINTING MARKET. THE DECLINE DOES NOT MEAN THERE WAS BEEN A CHANGE IN THE FUNDAMENTALS. EXTERNAL FACTORS -- OIL PRICES, INTEREST RATES AND CURRENCIES -- ARE BETTER," SAID SHIGERU AKIBA, HEAD TRADER AT UBS PHILLIPS AND DREW INTERNATIONAL LTD.

BUT INVESTORS MAY IGNORE SUCH FACTORS THIS WEEK AS THEY WORRY ABOUT AND WAIT FOR OTHER THINGS, BROKERS SAID.

Hong kong Market Report

HONG KONG, OCT 4, REUTER - SHARE PRICES CLOSED LOWER BUT ABOVE THE DAY'S LOW AFTER ANOTHER SLUGGISH TRADING WITH MOST INVESTORS REMAINING ON THE SIDELINES, BROKERS SAID. THE HANG SENG INDEX FELL 13.31 TO 2,415.76 WHILE THE BROADER-BASED HONG KONG INDEX EASED 9.64 TO 1,589.01. TURNOVER WAS SLIGHTLY NIGHER AT 349.71 MLN N.K. DLRS AGAINST HONDAY'S 297.45 MLN.

"THE SLUGGISHNESS IS A GLOBAL TREND AND WE NEED SOMEONE SOMEWHERE TO MAKE A LEAD," A LOCAL BROKER SAID. "THE SHARE PRICE DROP IN TAIWAN MAY BENEFIT US LATER AS HONG KONG ALWAYS IS A MAVEN FOR IOLE FUNDS."

Consumer groups announce new Nestle boycott

WASHINGTON, Oct 4, (AP): A Group of consumer activists said today it is resuming a boycott of the Swiss-based Nestle Corporation because of its promotion practices for infant formula and is extending the boycott to the New York-hased American Action for Corporate Accountability accused Nestle and American Home Products, which it called the largest manufacturers of infant formula in the world, of distributing free formula through maternity wards as a promotional tactic that undermines the practice of hreast-feeding.

Representatives of Nestle and AHP have rejected the accusations and said they were complying with World Health Organisation and individual national codes on the subject.

Resolution

"After the World Health Assembly passed its resolution calling for an end to the industry practice of dumping formula supplies in hospitals and maternity wards almost 2-1/2 years ago, we assumed that Nestle and the other formula manufacturers would ahide by the resolution," Janice Mantell, the executive director of Action for Corporate Accountability, said in a news

"Since that time, we have been patiently meeting with the companies, and writing to the companies and waiting for them to change the dangerous promotional tactic ... the hard fact is that babies are dying as the companies are violating the WHA resolution."

She said her group asked Nestle and AHP to present a plan for ending their supplies programmes by later today.

"Neither company has produced one," she said. "We have no other recourse hut to ask for public support of a boycott against these two companies." Action

Action for Corporate Accountability, based in Minneapolis, Minnesota, is the successor of groups that organised a boycott against Nestle from 1977-1984 in the United States and nine other countries. The groups halted the boycott after Nestle agreed to comply with the World Health Organisation code.

Action for Corporate Accountability said its "evidence reveals systematic corporate dumping of large quantities of baby milk on Third World hospitals, which violates national law in some countries, and defies World Health Organisation restrictions on the marketing of infant forirag boosts oil flow through Turkey

ANKARA, Oct 4, (Reuter): Iraq is boosting oil exports through Turkey to the Mediterranean, hut Turkish sources said Iran was dragging its feet over plans for a pipeline from its Ahvaz fields to the Turkish coast. Baghdad had increased the oil pumped from Kirkuk in northern Iraq to Yumurtalik on Turkey's Mediterranean coast to 1.7 million barrels per day (BPD), official Turkish sources said "This is more than the design capacity of 1.5 million BPD but the operation is running smoothly," an official said. Earlier, Turkish sources said there was little progress in plans to construct a pipeline from Iran through Turkey.

"Iran appears to be foot-dragging. There are basic differences of understanding on both sides and the will to go ahead seems divided in Tehran," one source said. Nezihi Berkkam, directorgeneral of Turkey's state-run oil company Botas told Reuters the pipeline was discussed when State Minister Yusuf Ozal visited Tehran last month.

"Iran appeared very keen to construct the pipeline earlier this vear, before it agreed to a ceasefire in the Gulf war, one source said. "But now the attitude seems to have changed." Iran's oil output since the August 20 ceasefire has remained constant at around 2.3 million BPD, with export put at around 1.6 million BPD.

Iraq, which maintained a steady flow of 1.5 million BPD through its twin pipeline across Turkey since 1987, started to raise the volume just before Iran agreed to the ceasefire in July this

Kuwait managed to keep inflation at 0.7pc in '87: ILO

GENEVA, Oct 4, (KUNA): The Arab Gulf countries are one of the world's big success stories when it comes to controlling inflation, according to a survey by the International Labour Organisation.

While most countries last year were subjected to renewed inflationary pressures, twn Gulf states actually managed to maintain negative inflation rates.

In 1987 Bahrain and Saudi Arabia both registered a fall in their national price indexes, nf-1.7 per cent, from -1.9 and -2.2

respectively the year before that. Kuwait, the only other Gulf Co-operation Council state in the ILO survey, managed to keep inflation at just 0.7 per cent, compared with the 0.5 per cent achieved in

Debt

The country with the best price record was Senegal, where the price index fell by 5.2 per cent, while the world's highest inflation was in Brazil, at 367 per cent. compared with 68 per cent in 1986.

Other states with negative inflation included the Central African Republic, at-3.6 per cent, Haiti with -4.1 per cent, Gabon at -2.5 per cent, Jurdan at -1.8 per cent and Holland at -0.2 per cent. Nevertheless, the general trend world-wide in 1987 was of rising inflation, with 62 of the 102 countries surveyed showing overall price rises. However, 38 managed lower rates, and in two cases, inflation levels were unchan-

Rebound

Many of the Latin American states, which had succeeded in sharply reducing inflation in 1986, saw prices rebound last year, in some cases doubling, or worse. Argentina, for example, went from 82 to

One noticeable exception on the continent was Bolivia, which had 11 per cent inflation last year compared with the astronomic rate of 8,171 per cent in 1985. Europe's highest inflation, of 170 per cent, was in Yugoslavia, followed by Poland at 30 per cent and Iceland at 24 per

Many African countries saw prices rising between 20 and 30 per cent, while Somalia had one of the continent's worst records, at 41 per cent, the ILO study

Dollar in narrow range, oil prices recover

1.ONDON. Oct 4. (Reuter): Crude oil prices fell as much as 40 cents a barrel carly today, but later recovered to end the day unchanged to a few cents lower than Monday, traders said.

North Sea Brent blend, the most widely traded crude, sold at fresh 26-month lows early today, with cargoes for lifting in November traded as low as $11,40 a barrel.

Crude oil prices are at their lowest for two years and down $2 in just over a week. Traders cited evidence of higher OPEC output in a market already in surplus. Production

'Saudi Arabia wants to abide by the production levels assigned to it under OPEC accords if the other members agree to return to their production levels," said a statement by the royal cabinet in Riyadh on Monday. Traders said gains were likely to be short-lived, unless OPEC took firm sieps to curb excess production.

OPEC's average crude output in September was put at 20.6 million barrels per day (BPD) by the latest Reuter survey, 600,000 BPD above the 20 million estimated for August.

Towards the European close, Brent blend for prompt lifting was quoted five cents lower at $11.60 a barrel.

The leading US grade, West Texas Intermediate (WTI), was unchanged at $13.20, while the key Mideast grade, Dubai, was five cents down at $9.60. The dollar was hardly changed in European currency markets. Gold prices were firmer while Europe's stock exchanges generally ended a shade higher.

Wall Street stocks showed little change by New York's midday when the Dow Jones industrial average was up two points at 2,107.

The price of gold was fixed at $398.50 an ounce in the European afternoon, above a previous fix of 396. Traders said the price had traded within a narrow range in recent days, with scant demand for bullion, a favoured investor hedge against inflation. In London shares were mixed to firm in afternoon business, recovering from an early setback in the light of a firmer Wall Street performance, dealers said.

Sentiment was earlier upset by Grand Met making a $5.2 billion bid for food manufacturer and retailer Pillsbury of the US, sending its cash overseas instead of bidding for Cadbury or Ranks Hovis McDougall as had been rumoured.

Grand Met topped the actives list, falling 32p to 454 on volume of 14.6 million shares. Cadbury ended 1p up at 374 after a low of 356 while RHM closed 1p down at 378 after 369. FTSE 100 was up 5.6 to 1,808.2 at 1453 GMT after a day's low of 1,787.

Dealers said that, on balance, the earlier declines on the prospect of UK cash going overseas for the Pillsbury bid were overdone and prices recovered to reflect

Grand Met's planned £479 million rights issue, to help fund the Pillsbury bid, also dented market sentiment, Grand Met had been tipped to make an acquisition ever since it flagged the sale of its Inter Continental Hotels Group, which was sold for $2.27 billion to Seibu Saison of Japan last week.

Stake

Analysts said the bid for Pillsbury stands a good chance of success, adding that Grand Met's earnings for the year would be diluted only slightly if the deal went through,

The British government's request to the Kuwait Investment Office (KIO) to reduce its stake in British Petroleum to 9.9 per cent from the 21.6 per cent it currently holds over the next 12 months also hit market sentiment, dealers said.

The market is concerned about the volume of BP stock which could be released onto the market following Britian's

BP fell 2p to 235 on volume of over 14 million shares. Analysts said a large block of BP shares coming onto the market could be expected to trade significantly below the current price.
BP said it welcomed the British government decision, saying the prime issue was now the orderly disposal of the shares. The KIO said it was extremely dissatisfied with the way the UK Monopolies Commission reached its decision on Kuwait's stake.

"At this stage the government has to be very resolute on the tight monetary policies. Fiscal measures such as improving tax collection are also needed but are insufficient by themselves," a senior Turkish banker said. Another banker, Vural

Deficit

The budget deficit rose to 1,711 billion lira ($1.02 billion) in the first seven months of 1988, compared with 651.7 billion ($389 million) in January-July last vear.

Ozal, a conservative who came to office in 1983 after three years of army rule, said last week no big operation to curb inflation was planned. He offered only fine tuning.

Two thirds of the electorate opposed Ozal in a September 25 referendum on changing a minor constitutional article to bring forward municipal elections to November from next March.

The poll became a vote of confidence in the free-wheeling economic policies of Ozal, who claimed victory on the basis that the 35 per cent in favour was equivalent to a big majority for his Motherland Party in the 450seat parliament. The International Monetary Fund, the World Bank and the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development bave all demanded firm action to bring down inflation in Turkey, also saddled with a foreign debt of around $41 billion.

Bankers are concerned that Ozal does not want to introduce politically unpopular economic measures because of next March's elections which could see him lose control of major cities.

"We had boped to see the government getting a tight monetnry policy on the way immediately after the referendum but there are no signs of this," one banker said.

early 20th century. Li Shuhsien, 63, the widow and fifth wife of The Son of Heaven, who ascended to the Dragon Throne in 1908 and ended up as a gardener after the communist revolution, has been living in obscurity for many years. But now she is caught up in a wave of nostalgia for China's imperialist past. Thousands are queueing to see The Last Emperor the film that portrays the life and extraordinary times of her husband, who died in 1967. The Chinese have become fascinated with their pre-revolution past, enveloped for so long in a fog of Marxist revisionism.

Chou was himself the revolutionary offspring of an aristocratic family and was fas-cinated with Pu Yi's ideological volte-face. The leadership's concern with Pu Yi was not merely sentimental; it saw the propaganda value of making the emperor a model communist. Every Chinese new year, Choi invited the former Lord of Ten Thousand Tears to his house for dinner.

He also arranged for special treatment for his impotence and even found him a wife. Li Shuhsien, a nurse 20 years his junior, was the eleventh woman to whom Pu Yi was introduced "People told him he shoul-dn't be so picky because he wasn't an emperor anymore." she said. They married three months later, but Pu Yi's impotence remained and he was unable to father the children he had always wanted.

She says now that Pu Yi opened up sparkling new horizons for her. He took her out most nights, to the opera or to dance at the cultural workers' club. He confided to her that his previous marriages were all arranged and were devoid of the love he had found with Li. "He told me that with me he found the warmth of a family which he had never known, grnwing up as a distant god revered by everyone around him," she said.

This account contrasts with those of outsiders, who said that Li was a shrew who nagged

MENTION the word dentist or toothache in a room full of people and the reaction among most of them will be the same. They shudder slightly, go a delicate shade of green and then, when they have recovered from the shock, begin to compare notes on how long it has been since they got their teeth

It is strange the aversion we all have to taking care of our teeth, when they are actually among the most important equipment the body has. Without them we couldn't break up the food we need to survive, we couldn't form

words properly and our faces would be a lot less attractive than they are.
It isn't natural for teeth to decay and fall out towards middle age, as a lot of people think.

Teeth are designed to last as long as you do! It is only through neglect andeating the wrong foods that problems occur leading to fillngs, caps and other dental

Imagine being able to say in that room of shuddering people, that the only thing your dentist does is compliment you on your healthy teeth. And he won't be the only one Your beautiful smile will be noticed everywhere you go. To understand why you should care for your teeth you have to understand exactly how teeth decay and other dental problems start. They are directly connected to your diet.

Sugar is the chief enemy of teeth. It causes an acid to form in the mouth which may only small sugary snacks contin-uously throughtout the day keeps the teeth bathed in acid most of the time. This is especially harmful to children's teeth which are softer and more vulnerable than adults. To improve the chances your teeth have of surviving past middle age, you have to cut down on sugar in all its forms not just the sugar you can physically see and which you put in your tea or on your cereal. Cakes, hiscuits, sweets, jams, soft drinks and a lot of convenience foods contain far more sugar than you need. If you find that you can't cut out sweet foods altogether, try to contain your consumption of them to meal times. By doing this you are eating sweet things only once or twice a day and not throughout the day. This applies tn the children too. Instead of huying them sweets while at the shops let them look forward to a treat after their evening meal. And follow it with a piece of fruit or an instruction to clean their

Another way to care for your family's teeth is to cut down on the sugar you use while cooking. Most recipes suggest that you use a lot more sugar than you actually need. Where a recipe says eight ounces (200g), try using four for a change. In no time at all your palate will have adjusted to less sugar in everything you eat until it gets to the stage where you hate things that are sweet. Although correcting your diet is the first way to help your teeth, dental hygiene comes a close second. This means devoting time to your teeth everyday to see that they are cleaned thoroughly and that every trace of plaque has been removed?

Start off your new plan of action with a good hard look at your toothbrush. Squashed, splayed out hristles are useless when it comes to cleaning your teeth because you think you are doing the job when nothing is happening at all.

On the other hand if your hrush is still in perfect condition after a year you are obviously not using it enough. Care, not force is what gets teeth clean!

Choose a brush that has bristles of several lengths — they are far better at reaching the different levels of your teeth which are not flat to start with. Nylon bristles with round heads are the type dentists recommend, not natural bristle which is inclined to be too soft.

Choose medium bristles, if they are too hard you can scratch the gum but if they are too soft, not enough plaque will be removed. Make sure that the head of the brush is not too large for your mouth or it will not reach the awkward corners. A tiny interspace brush is useful in addition to your normal brush for just this reason. Last thing at night is probably the best time to work on your teeth because you won't have a hus to catch or children to get off to school. One good cleaning a day is far better for your teeth than three superficial brushings.

Start with your brush and usual toothpaste, spending time working over the entire mouth and paying attention to the gum margins, backs of the teeth, behind and between the back teeth and molars. Try to remember not to wet your brush before you start. It only softens the bristles and reduces their effectiveness.

Use only a tiny amount of toothpaste. Manufacturers are inclined to run advertisements showing people spreading toothpaste from one end of the brush to the other. This creates an excess of foam which means that the brush is only sliding around your teeth and not actually cleaning them.

Next use an interspace brush to work at the crevices and difficult spots. Do both the front and back of each tooth. Use dental floss to remove the plaque between the teeth but be careful — it can cause gum damage if used too roughly.

After giving yourself the works in this way for about a week, huy some plaque reveal-ing tablets to test how well you are doing. These are harmless temporary dyes which stain the plaque so that you can see exactly where it is.

If you use them several times a month you will be able to see how you are improving your brushing technique.

Plaque is made up of bacteria which huilds up on the teeth, particularly around the gum margin. These bacteria find the warm wet conditions of the mouth ideal for prolific It is recognised by a furry feeling on the teeth, most noticable early in the morning.

Incidentally, bacteria can grow on the tongue as well as on the teeth so it too could benefit from a stimulating hrushing every now and then. If bacteria is not removed it causes tooth decay or gum disease. If the bacteria in plaque is left on the teeth for any time it reacts with any food eaten to form the harmful acid that destroys tooth enamel. Gum disease is caused in a similar way. If plaque if left on the teeth it will harden or calcify, penetrat-ing the gum, causing inflammation and bleeding and even causing the gum to recede in some cases. The first symptoms of gum disease are a slight reddening of the gums and bleeding when you brush your teeth or bite something hard. Eventually the bone structure that holds the teeth in the jaw is affected causing teeth to fall out. Eating the right food and cleaning your teeth properly are two of the three ways to ensure that your teeth remain bright, gleaming and your own until you are 95. The third way is the twice-yearly visit to the dentist. It is necessary if you want to catch small cavities in time to prevent them from growing into fully-fledged jawbreaking toothaches.

Make an appointment now to vist your dentist and while you are there tell him to contact you in six months time to remind you when your next visit is due!

Exercising female bones

By David Lindley

FOR elderly but otherwise healthy women, the fragility of their bones is a constant and sometimes life-threatening danger. It is well known that after the menopause a woman's bones begin to deteriorate sharply, losing mass and strength.

Now two researchers from Pennsylvania State University have evidence that the severity of bone loss in later life is mostly determined by skeletal development during a girl's teenage years, and are boping to come up with recommendations for diet and exercise which will minimize the hazards of old age. Menopause

Bones are not stable, but are constantly being broken down and rebuilt throughout a person's life in a continuous cycle of loss and regeneration. In women, the ability of the body to remake sound hones is closely linked to the level of oestrogen, the female sex hor-

After the menopause the oestrogen level falls, and the body loses much of its ability to counteract gradual hone loss, which continues as before. This phenomenon, osteoporosis, is signalled by a gen-eral deterioration and greater fragility of the bones. Hard exercise and a lnw-fat high-fibre diet both tend to reduce oestrogen levels, and can lead to menstrual irregularity. As an extreme example, some female marathon runners suffer from amenorthoea.

The teenage gymnasts who dominate the Olympics often begin menstruating late, and are irregular once they start.

But marathon runners and teenage gymnasts are hardly a large or representative sample of women. A study conducted by Dr Tom Lloyd and Dr James Buchanan of Pennsylvania State University, published in the Journal of Obstetrics and Gynaecology, set nut to lnok for relationships between diet, exercise, oestrogen level (as measured by menstrual regularity) and bone density in ynung women.

Lloyd and Buchanan compared young women who did

The amount of exercise that triggers menstrual irregularity varies enormously.

letes who ran, cycled or took aerohic classes regularly. For both athletes and nnn-athletes in their teens, those who missed one third or more of their periods had measurably lower bone density.

In previous research, Lloyd, Buchanan and others found that hone density is highest in women before they reach 20, and begins to fall off afterwards, so girls who are irregular in their teens are more likely to suffer from osteoporosis much later on in

'Amnng athletic women, the picture is not yet clear. For those who menstruate regularly, exercise is a benefit, and the athletes had a higher bone density. But a woman who exercises enough to cause menstrual irregularity usually has lower hone density than someone who does not exercise.

Exercise

The amount of exercise that triggers menstrual irregularity varies enormously. In a group of 10 women who run 20 miles a week, twn might become irregular, but annther two might be capable of running 100 miles with no problems. The influence of diet adds further complications. For reasons not understood, dietary fibre tends to reduce the oestrogen level, while fat raises it. A high-fibre, low-fat diet is undoubtedly good for helping to prevent heart disease and breast cancer, but may be bad for one's bones.

Lloyd and Buchanan are continuing their study, hoping to find ways of determining a sensible and healthy combination of diet and exercise. From the results they have now, Lloyd says that swimming looks like a good choice, because it develops bodily strength but, unlike long-distance running, encourages a sensible proportion of body fat, which is good for the oestrogen

Lloyd also emphasizes that women older than 20 should not be discouraged into think-ing the course of their old age is already fixed. SALMIYA, Amman Street near

Saints edge Cowboys in final seconds

NEW ORLEANS, Oct 4, (AP): Morten Andersen's 49-yard field goal as time ran out last night gave the New Orleans Saints a 20-17 victory over the Dallas

Andersen's winning kick came after Dallas' Roger Ruzek — who earlier had missed a 39-yard field goal that hit the goal post connected from 39-yards out with 24 seconds to go to tie it 17-17. The Cowboys went 43 yards on eight plays to set up the

But Saint Mel Gray returned the ensuing kickoff 39 yards to his 42. Bohhy Hebert hil Brett Perriman with a 26-yard pass to the 32nd yardline, setting up Andersen's kick.

Field

Hebert threw two early touchdown passes and Andersen kicked a 27-yard third-quarter field goal for the Saints, only to see Steve Pelluer and Herschel Walker lead Dallas back.

The win, the fourth straight after an opening game loss for New Orleans, was only its second ever in 13 meetings with Dallas and its first since Oct 17, 1971. It moved the Saints into a threeway tie for first in the National Football Conference West, with San Francisco and the Los Angeles Rams.

CELTIC TAKE ON HONVED BUDAPEST AT HOME

set to reach second round

MADRID, Oct 4, (Renter): Real Madrid, recovering the form which made them the most feared team in Europe a year ago. have the perfect opportunity to add to their growing confidence tomorrow when they meet Norwegian champions Moss i. a Enropean Cup first round second leg tie.

On a night of 49 ties in the three European cluh soccer competitions, the Spanish champions' trip to northern Europe is hardly the most spectaeular match in prospect as they travel to Scandinavia armed with a 3-0 advantage from the first leg in Spain two weeks ago.

Given

But, in the absence of holders PSV Eindhoven of the Nelherlands, who were given a lirst round bye, and Italian cham-pions AC Milan, who play on Thursday, it is one of the most significant as the star-studded Spanish team embark on their familiar bid for a record seventh Champions' Cup triumph.

Amonth ago, at the start of the Spanish League campaign, Real appeared to be struggling following the mid-summer arrival of West German midfielder Bernd Schuster from rivals Barcelona ... and doubts began to creep in about the overall quality of the improving performance have dispelled all that, however, and last Sunday, orchestrated by the un predictable and often wayward genius of Schuster, Real Madrid beat Real Oviedo 3international striker Emilio Butragueno proving his personal return to form after a dismal showing in the finals of the European Championship in June, hy scoring twice.

Butragueno, Mexican Hugo Sanchez and Schuster now combine to offer a tantalising prospect m the Real attack which should have little trouble in completing a very comfortable aggregate victory to secure a place in the second round. Neutrals will hope the succeeding draws in the competition will not pair Real with Milan, who will be without Dutch international captain Rund Gullit for their tie against Vitosha Sofia of Bulgaria on Thursday.

Gullit is still recovering from an ankle injury but fellow-Dut-chmen Marco van Basten and Frank Rijkaard will play in a Milan team which will not be announced until midfielder Alherigo Evani and striker Antonio Virdis report back from Olympic duties. Milan lead 2-0 from the first leg. Real and Milan are likely to be joined by the 1986 Champions' Cup winners Steaua Bucharest, who start their second leg tie against Sparta Prague in Romania with a 5-1 advantage, and 1987 winners Porto of Portugal, who travel to HJK Helsinki with a 3-0 lead.

Further evidence of Eastern Europe's growing soccer strength, following the Soviet Union's success in the Olympic tour-nament, is likely to be offered by Spartak Moscow, Gornik Zabrze and Red Star Belgrade. Spartak travel to Glentoran of Northern Ireland with a 2-0 lead for protection and Gornik to Jeunesse Esch of Luxembourg with a 3-0 advantage while Red Star, 5-0 up from the first leg, are at home to Dundalk of Ireland.

Honved Budapest are likely to find it more difficult to follow their East European neighbours into the second round, however, as they will be involved in one of the most competitive ties of the night at Glasgow Celtic, Celtic, European Cup winners in 1967, trail 1-0 from the first leg and are struggling for form, but always rise to the hig European occasions at Celtic Park.

The Scottish champions will include 36-year-old former international Alan Rough in goal hut will be without injured midfielder Tommy Burns.

In the Cup Winners' Cup, holders Mechelen of Belgium, having trounced Beggen of Luxembourg 8-1 on aggregate, are already awaiting the second round draw.

Johan Cruyff's Barcelona, 2-0 up against Fram Reykjavik of Iceland and playing well in the Spanish League, should join them together with Belgium's Anderlecht, 3-1 up against Metz of France and East Germany's Karl Zeiss Jena, defending a 5-0 advantage against Krems in Aus-

In the UEFA Cup, the most exciting tie could be in Amsterdam where struggling Ajax attempt to recover a 4-2 deficit against Sporting Lisbon.

Four Europeans seeded

LONDON, Oct 4, (Reuter): Europe's leading four players were named as the seeds and given first round byes when the draw was made today for the 25th World Matchplay Golf Championship beginning at Wentworth on Thursday.

Defending champion lan Woosnam of Britain, British Open champion Seve Ballesteros of Spain, US Masters champinn Sandy Lyle and 1987 British Open champion Nick Faldo, were seeded 1-4 and will not have to play their opening matches until Friday.

Woosnam's opponent will be the winner of Thursday's 36 hole first round clash between US PGA champion Jeff Sluman and unheralded Japanese Nohuo

Mark McCumber of the United States, the US Tour-nament Players champion, will face European Tour Stalwart Mark McNulty of Zimbahwe on Thursday for the dubious privelege of tangling with Balles-teros in Friday's quarterfinals. Nick Price of Zimhabwe, who ran Ballesteros so close in the British Open at Royal Lytham in July, will face Australian Rodger Davis with the winner going through to play Lyle.

The full draw:

Haider takes Galaxy past Casuals

A DEPLETED Casuals team, missing seven regulars, were heavily beaten by Galaxy cricketers in the first round of the Pat Keely Cup at Ahmadi on Thursday.

Galaxy batted first and initially found the going tough against the pace of Anderson who began with three overs for just two runs. Openers Rana (47) and Raza (39) struggled against Snowden's variation and were fortunate on several occasions.

Changes

It seemed Casuals could make a match of it until they were forced to bowling changes. Opening bat Wells (2 for 65) was suprised to be called for his first ever spell for Casuals and had to watch Haider (71 no) lash out at his efforts. The Galaxy score raced away at this point and even the recall of the opening bowlers could not stem the tide. Galaxy amassed 198 runs in their allotted

In reply, Casuals suffered an early seiback as Tudball (1) went in the first over. With Snowden unwell, Casuals were already through to their tail. Wells (26) tried to attack and Hodgson (25) weighed in with a typically useful contribution, but Casuals did not have the weight of batting to worry the opposition. Qamar (3 for 23) and Waheed (2 for 9) with Riaz (2 for 7) managed to keep Casuals down to 98 for 8.

BAAB backs Christie over drug test

LONDON, Oct 4. (Reuter): Britaio's 100 metres silver medallist Linford Christie was given the total support of the British Amateur Athletic Bnard (BAAB) today over his "socalled positive drug test" during the Seoul Olympics.

"We fully accept the statement made by Christie, accepted finally by the International Olym-Committee (IOC) medical committee and subsequently by the full international commit-tee," a BAAB statement said, adding it gave the athlete "its 100 per cent backing."

Christie finished fourth in the 200 metres in Seoul but traces of ephredine, a banned substance, were found in his urine sample.

He was cleared by the Olympic medical committee after a lengthy hearing during which he said he had drunk a tea made from the herh ginseng and was unaware it contained epbedrine.

The BAAB statement said the small amounts of the drug found in Christie's urine sample were those that would be found in every day cough cures. Unity score 7-run win over

NEW YORK, Oct 4, (Reuter): Troubled world heavyweight champion Mike Tyson says be is in no hurry to see the wife who calls him 'scary' and adds that the last thing he wants to do is give up his life for love.

With those words, Tysoo today entered a new round in his bout of ring fights with everyone around him - including himself.

Tysoo's wife, actress Robin Givens, flew to California yesterday a day after calling police to their mansion to calm down the 22-year-old boxer when he flew into a rase and allegedly beat the stuffing out of the furniture.

Temper

Chairs, a sugar bowl and a fireplace andiroo flew out the window of Tysoo's mansion in Bernardsville, New Jersey, in the boxer's latest highly-publicised temper tantrum.

"I look il (an andiron) from the fireplace and threw it through the window. So what? I paid for it. It's my house," Tyson told reporters.

As for Givens, Tyson told the New York Daily News: "Love is a feeling, but I'm not going to give up my life for it. I'm not in a burry to see her."

Tyson manager Bill Cayton said the fighter would visit a "world-renowned psychiatrist" today to get a second opinion on whether he suffered from a manic-depression so severe that he flew into uncontrollable

Givens blames Tyson's temper tantrums on manic-depression and says he is refusing to take lithium salts to control it.

In a television interview last Friday with ber busband, she called Tyson 'scary' and violent.

Io recent weeks, Tyson has smashed his car into a tree, smashed his hand in the face of another boxer in a street fight ouside a clothing store in Harlem, and allegedly chased his wife and mother-in-law around a hotel in Moscow. Police were called on Sunday to his Bernardsville mansion but the local police chief said no charges were made because Givens refused to press charges.
